YCC Cam Cap

YCC Cam Cap is a very easy to use application designed to help you save webcam stream on your local disks. The interface is impressively simple and this is only the result of the limited number of features integrated into the app, as the user benefits only from a few customization options, all displayed right in the main window. Being able to save the content as AVI, YCC Cam Cap lets you configure the capture directory and pick one of the current streams played in Yahoo Messenger, with a bunch of options displayed at the bottom of the window. For example, YCC Cam Cap allows you to capture your very own webcam too, but also capture incoming webcams, define the interval for searching webcam windows and configure the capture rate. There's a help file as well, but it's only a document, so a text editor is needed to access the available documentation. As you can see, YCC Cam Cap is quite a basic application, so you shouldn't experience any problem when trying to figure out how to use it. However, keep in mind that you need Yahoo Messenger to run YCC Cam Cap and the program seems to work just fine with most versions of the instant messaging tool. YCC Cam Cap runs on low resources and runs flawlessly on all Windows iterations, without hampering system performance at all. Overall, YCC Cam Cap is one of the easiest ways to record webcam streams, with minimum configuration options and a basic interface to serve its purpose. ...
