You can start with a fresh copy of Windows from Windows 7/8/8.1/10 to the one that you have. Nevertheless, while you have the ISO file for Ubuntu, or you have your currently installed Windows ISO file, you could copy the files to the USB bootable drive. The Startup Disk Creator will do this for you for the most part. Since you're creating a bootable USB the only thing you should need to do is copy the files to the USB stick. The Windows Startup Disk Creator will make the USB bootable. Then as you boot from the USB, everything will run as it would normally from the hard drive. Personally I prefer Windows' built in Startup Disk Creator. it's a little better in practice. However, it also requires that you have a Windows 10 ISO file on your computer. In the program I have selected a blank blank drive to create a Bootable USB. All you need to do is make sure that you have a Windows version ISO file on your computer. If you have Rufus, then do the Windows version Startup Disk Creator. If you do not have the Windows version, download it, right-click the ISO file, and choose Burn. In Rufus, choose the ISO file, and click Burn. You'll need the ISO file from a version of Windows that is the same version as your motherboard is.

The features of FileVault 2 have been announced by Apple at WWDC2016, and more support for the new features were announced at WWDC2017 (iOS9). The technologies behind FileVault 2 have been used in Apple FileVault since OSX 10.6 which came out a few years back, you'll see the same technologies used in FileVault2 on startup. Legacy FileVault has an underlying XTS-AES-128 cipher that is based on the AES standard. And with the trust for AES being so well known and widespread by now, you know that this means nothing is ever really hackable (unless you wanted to hack AES itself of course). FileVault 2 uses a 256bit AES based cipher that you can find also on the SHA-2 key on your OSX keychain. The legit trust (OSX) and the internal keychain (iOS) are used to help secure FileVault 2, you'll find the same keychain and legit trust used by legacy FileVault. As for the initialization vector (IV) - this is generated on a per-volume basis, in FileVault 2 and the legacyFileVault. The generated IV is used by the encryption/decryption routines in the underlying algorithms to randomly populate the the IV. In FileVault 2, once the disk is encrypted, the generated IV is used to encrypt the data in the disk.
