Cps Download Motorola

you can download the cps source code from the motorola web site. this version is 1.7 and the file is rvn4191cps.zip. the code has been tested on windows xp and the sources are written for visual studio. the file is split into four different folders. the vnav_usb, cps_usb, vnav_settings, and cps_settings folders are the core source code. the cps software is good but it has two major problems. first, it is dos-based, which means it can't use most usb devices. it will work with a usb hard drive, but the only way to get the program on the hard drive is to download it to the drive. the other problem is that the cps is a separate program from the one you have to buy. it does not integrate with the radio programming software to allow easy access to your programming. the moto program is faster, easier and has fewer bugs than the cps, and it can use most usb devices. in the past, if you needed cps you had to buy it, then you would download it to a drive and install it, and then you would have to find the part number (usually in the manual or the programming manual). now, moto sells a web-based version of the cps and installs it on your computer. now you can just log in to the web-based program and program your radios, or you can download the manual and follow the instructions and have it all done in about 10 minutes. the web-based program is a little faster than the dos version, but the dos version is still the most reliable way to program a radio. the web-based program is a two step process: first you need to log into the web-based program and enter your user name and password. then you need to download the cps. 5ec8ef588b
